To bring together the records of the past and to house them in buildings where they will be preserved for the use of men living in the future, a nation must believe in three things. It must believe in the past. It must believe in the future. It must, above all, believe in the capacity of its people so to learn from the past that they can gain in judgment for the creation of the future.

FOREWORD

We are at war. Evaluations of all things, both tangible and intangible, are constantly changing. A second-hand tire used to be considered "just a second-hand tire". Now one is indeed fortunate if he can procure one at any price.

Likewise, a birth certificate used to be considered as a nuisance, more or less, by the average person. Today a birth certificate assumes a place of vital importance to all citizens.

When the Historical Records Project of the W P.A. started the work on this Guide to Public Vital Statistics in New Mexico in 1940, I am sure no one realized how important it would become in two years time. The project was originally started to furnish useful employment for needy, unemployed persons. The value of this Guide is inestimable to people born in New Mexico but who do not have a birth certificate in their possession. It is estimated that 300,000 people born in this state do not have birth certificates on record. If all of these are to be recorded, it is a tremendous undertaking for the State Division of Vital Statistics.

We are willing to do our part and we are ready insofar as possible. Our office is now running from 8:30 A.M. to 12 o'clock midnight with two shifts. Crowded office and vault space and insufficient filing facilities are two of our biggest handicaps.

Our requirements for filing a delayed certificate of birth are not as strict as some states and not as simple as others. We have tried to maintain an unbiased, conservative attitude on delayed certificates of birth at all times.

As State Registrar of Vital Statistics of the New Mexico Department of Public Health, I wish to congratulate the Historical Records Project, the sponsors and all individuals connected with the preparation of the Guide for this excellent piece of work. So far as I know, it is the first attempt in this state to correlate information pertaining to vital statistics and the result is to be commended. The work has been well done and should be of great service to the people of this state and to this Department.

PREFACE

The Historical Records Survey began its work as a Nation-wide undertaking in January 1936 as part of the Federal Project No. 1 of the Works Progress Administration. In New Mexico the Survey became an independent unit in March of the same year. The Survey is now a unit of the Research and Records Division of the Division of Community Service Programs of the Work Projects Administration.

In the fall of 1940 the Survey was requested to undertake a survey of Vital Statistics records, to aid in the National Defense Program, at the request of the National Defense Commission and the United States Bureau of the Census. Realizing the value of this survey it was decided to publish this data in the form of a guide in each state. This Guide to Public Vital Statistics Records in New Mexico is based on the data secured in this survey.

This guide is arranged by the type of vital statistics record, further segregated into county and State records. A discussion of the evolution of laws for the keeping of each type of vital statistics record precedes each set of entries. These essays are documented with citations to the Laws of New Mexico, etc. Copies of the pertinent portions of the laws and opinions of the Attorney General are included in the appendix of this Guide for the convenience of the user. The entries show inclusive dates, nature of the record, number of volumes or containers, method of arrangement, indexing, and the custodian.

A complete subject index is included in this Guide and may be found following the appendix. A handy ready reference index by counties for births, deaths, and marriages will be found immediately preceding the subject index. A group of sample forms furnished through the courtesy of the State Registrar of Vital Statistics will be found in the back of this book.

No attempt has been made to tabulate records in the custody of religious bodies, except for records kept by Old Catholic Missions. Since the records themselves were unavailable to our workers a complete breakdown of the contents could not be made. These records were included because of their antiquity, some records dating as far back as 1691.

This Guide was assembled by John B. Hover. Legal material was compiled by James B. Gilmour. Mimeotyping was done by Melle F. Brown. The index was compiled by Martin H. Quirk.

Our grateful appreciation is extended to Miss Billy Tober, State Registrar of Vital Statistics, Department of Public Health, and to the numerous county officials throughout the State for their cooperation and assistance in collecting the data for this Guide.

In addition to this Guide the Survey has published inventories of county and Federal archives and a directory of Churches in New Mexico. For a complete list of publications, see page 135.

Address all requests for information concerning the Survey and its activities in New Mexico to the State Supervisor, Historical Records Survey, Box 90, University of New Mexico, Albuquerque, New Mexico.

VITAL STATISTICS RECORDS IN NEW MEXICO

Recent legislation pertaining to social security, child labor, emergency relief, and particularly selective service, has focused public attention upon the importance of maintaining accurate records of vital statistics in a form readily available for reference. This is particularly true of birth records which are invaluable in determining questions of parentage, heredity, and legitimacy; in establishing rights to property, inheritances, and citizenship; as well as claims to old-age assistance, workmen's compensation benefits, and widows' or mothers' pensions. Proof of age is becoming increasingly important in seeking employment, for passports, for the right to practice in the professions, and to hold public office.

Although what is now New Mexico was the earliest continuously inhabited civilized territory in the present United States, during Spanish and Mexican control there were no legal requirements whatever for the keeping of records of vital statistics, and even at the time of American occupation in 1846, and for a considerable time thereafter, no provision was made for the entering or preservation of such records.

The early Catholic missions dating back to the earliest occupancy of the territory by the Spanish, kept records of vital statistics, especially of marriages and births. These are probably not entirely accurate and cannot be complete, as on numerous occasions, by Indian uprisings, the missionaries were slain and the missions and records destroyed.

In the archives of the Archdiocese of Santa Fé are records of marriages, births, and deaths from various missions dating back as early as 1691. The more recent records are kept under the supervision of the Archbishop, but are still held by the pastors of the various parishes for their use and reference. These records are not, of course, public records and it is difficult to state definitely to what extent they are complete, although in the majority of instances they were carefully and accurately kept.[1]

Legislation in reference to marriage came years before any legal action was taken requiring the recording of births or deaths. The first legislative act on marriage was in 1860, when provision was made that any ordained clergyman of any sect, as well as any civil magistrate, could perform a valid and binding marriage.[2]

Vital Statistics Records in New Mexico

The first requirements for the recording of marriages came in 1863, when it was specifically required that anyone who officiated at marriage ceremonies was required to report all marriages performed by him to the probate clerk of the county at least twice each year. The probate clerk was required to prepare a register of marriages and to record therein all marriages reported to him as above required. Serious penalties were prescribed for failure to furnish the reports, or for failure to properly record them when reported.[1]

But very little change in the legal requirements for marriage or marriage records was made from that time until 1905, when it was required that a marriage license be obtained from the probate clerk before the ceremony could be performed. The party performing the ceremony was required to certify the marriage to the probate clerk within 90 days from the date of the ceremony. Immediately upon receipt of the certificate, the clerk was required to have it properly recorded and indexed in a record book kept for that purpose as a part of the permanent county records. In order to insure a uniform system of marriage records the same act very clearly outlined the form of application, license, and certificate to be used thereafter.[2]

Upon the creation of the State Board of Health in 1919, it was made the duty of everyone solemnizing a marriage to report the same to that board within 30 days after performing the ceremony, and for the county clerk in each county to report once a month to the State Board of Health, all marriages reported to him during the previous month.[3] This law was, however, amended 2 years later, and the provision for thus reporting marriages to the State Department was omitted from the amending act.[4] As a consequence, there is not now nor has there been (except for the period from 1919 to 1921) any requirement for the keeping of marriage records by any central agency under State control.

It appears that the importance of registration of births and deaths did not occur to the legislative bodies, not only in New Mexico but throughout the United States, for on February 11, 1903 a Congressional resolution was passed asking the cooperation of all states in compiling uniform and complete records of vital statistics.[5]

This resolution very plainly declared that the registration of births and deaths containing given information was essential to the progress of medical and sanitary science in preventing and correcting disease. The few laws in effect at the time differed widely in their requirements, whereas it was declared to be most important that registration should be conducted under laws that would insure a practical uniformity in the character and amount of information available from the records. The American Public Health Association and the United States Census Office cooperated to extend and promote the efficiency of registration by indicating the essential requirements for legislative enactments designed to secure accurate vital statistics, and appealed to the legislative bodies of the various states to enact legislation which would provide a uniform and complete system of registration of births and deaths.[1]

It is difficult to determine whether or not the first requirements for registration of births and deaths in New Mexico was in response to this appeal, but in 1907, the Legislature passed an act requiring the recording of all births and deaths.[2]

By this act every physician or attendant at a birth or a death was required to report to the probate clerk, within 30 days, full details of such birth or death giving very definitely specified information. The clerk was required to keep a book entitled "Register of Births" and another entitled "Register of Deaths" which books were to be made up of prescribed printed forms and in them entry was to be made of each birth and death. The clerk was further required to keep an index to each of the above books. A penalty was prescribed for failure to report any birth or death, or for failure to properly record the same.[3]

The 1907 act was amended 2 years later by adding the requirement that in addition to the "Registers" required to be kept, the clerk must also keep the certificate filed by the attendant at any birth or death and file the same numerically.[4] This was the first requirement for filing and keeping original certificates.

In later years, as people became more conscious of the importance of records of vital statistics, copies of church records and certificates verified in various ways were presented for registration. Naturally the necessity arose for a definite ruling as to what requirements had to be fulfilled in order to qualify a certificate for registration. Upon request the Attorney General ruled, April 12, 1910, that under the acts of 1907 and 1909, the clerk was not required to register and index certificates issued prior to April 1907, and those of later date only when executed by an attendant at the birth or death. He further held that the clerk had no authority to accept for record or file any certificate of which he obtained information from any other source.[5]

Vital Statistics Records in New Mexico

Through requirement of an act of 1919, physicians, midwives, or other attendants at any birth or death were required to report the same to the State Board of Health,[1] but in 1921 that act was amended and the individual reports to the State Board discontinued; as a matter of fact, the 1921 statute changed considerably the manner of reporting births and deaths. By that act the attendants at a birth or death were required to certify the same to the county health officer, who in turn was required to forward the original certificate to the State Director of Public Health and deliver a copy to the county clerk. Both the State Director of Public Health and the county clerk were to receive, file, bind, and index all certificates presented to them and keep the same as permanent State and county records.[2]

Although several laws were passed and changes made in the existing laws for the recording of births and deaths after that time, little progress was made in providing a satisfactory record of these statistics, principally because there was no centralized agency authorized to demand reports and insist on the records being kept. The legislative session of 1919 took the first constructive step toward perfecting a system of recording by the creation of a State Department of Health and requiring that every person performing a marriage ceremony and every attendant at a birth or a death report the same under penalty of fine, or imprisonment, or both, to the State Department at once. A report once a month to the State Department from each county clerk, of all marriages, births, and deaths, received by him during the previous month was also required.[3]

The United States Government was, in the meantime, placing more and more stress upon the necessity of establishing in each state a more uniform and more highly perfected system of compiling and keeping records of vital statistics. The Census Bureau had been made a permanent bureau,[4] and had tried in every way to impress on the various states the importance of bringing their records on vital statistics to a point of sufficient completeness and accuracy to justify their being admitted as a United States registration area. From these registration areas, the statistics were to be compiled each year from the records themselves,[5] instead of from reports of enumerators. Before any given region was accepted as a registration area, the Census Bureau had to be satisfied that the records kept in that region were sufficiently complete, sufficiently accurate, and contained the required information to an extent that would justify their records as being accepted as a correct indication of existing conditions.[1]

The collecting and preserving of records of vital statistics was only one of many obligations delegated to the State Health Department at the time of its creation, and as the maximum allowance for salaries was $10,000 per year,[2] the department was sadly hampered in its efforts by lack of finances, and the statistical department was forced to depend almost entirely upon outside aid for financial support.[3]

During the first years following the establishment of the State Health Department it was indeed a task to make much progress in the compiling of death and birth certificates for various easily understood reasons. Many districts in New Mexico are so isolated and the financial status of the residents such, that the services of a physician at a birth or even a death is practically impossible. Hence at the majority of the births in these sections, the only attendant is a midwife who, in most cases, has had no training whatever. The health department, through a nurse loaned to the department by the United States Children's Bureau, undertook a course of instructions for all midwives who could be located, and impressed upon them, among other things, the necessity of reporting all births.[4]

Congress in 1921 passed the Sheppard-Towner Act providing for financial aid of the states in promoting the welfare and hygiene of mothers and children. In order to be eligible for an allotment under this act, the State Legislature had to accept the conditions of the Congressional Act and make an appropriation of a like amount.[5] Through the efforts of the State Health Department, the State Legislature accepted the provisions of the act, and provided the required appropriation.[6]

The American Public Health Association, for a considerable period, furnished a well trained and thoroughly capable nurse to work on vital statistics, who did much to improve conditions, particularly by arousing the county health officers to a realization of the importance of improving the recording of births and deaths.[7] Funds from the Rockefeller Foundation permitted the hiring of two clerks, one to index, and the other to tabulate births and deaths, and Sheppard-Towner funds permitted another clerk who, among other things, prepared certificates of registration.[1] As of June 30, 1929, all allotments under the Sheppard-Towner Act ceased.[2]

A comprehensive campaign to obtain complete registration of births and deaths was evolved in 1928, wherein the Census Bureau, the United States Childrens' Bureau, the American Public Health Association, and the Rockefeller Foundation all cooperated with the State Health Department.[3] As the result of this campaign, as well as 10 years of untiring effort on the part of the forces in charge of this work for the State Health Department, on November 9, 1929, the Census Bureau notified the New Mexico Bureau of Health that New Mexico was admitted to the registration areas of the United States.[4]

The Legislature in 1929, established a special fund to be known as "The Health Protection Fund," which was to be used in helping the counties of the State to maintain improved health service. Before any of the fund could be used, however, an equal sum had to be provided from some other source. The amount of the fund for each of the years 1929 and 1930, was $10,000,[5] which amount was at once matched by the Federal Government, the Rockefeller Foundation, the Commonwealth Fund, local organizations, and individuals.[6] This was the first State aid the department had received.

In 1937, a midwife consultant was added to the Division of Public Health Nursing who visits the various health districts and instructs midwives either individually or in small groups, impressing upon them, among other things, the necessity of the proper filing of birth certificates.[7]

By legislative act of 1935, the State Health Department and the set-up throughout the State was changed by dividing the State into ten health districts, and instead of having county health officials, the powers and obligations formerly vested in these officials were transferred to district health officers. The former laws regarding recording of births and deaths were practically all repealed, but the same provisions were reenacted in the new law, so that there was very little, if any, change in the requirements for keeping said records.[1]

Again in 1937, practically all previous laws referring to the recording of births and deaths were repealed, but the same provisions were again reenacted in the repealing act. By this act the State Department of Public Health was created as a public corporation with all the powers incident thereto. The same act provided that all original birth and death certificates filed with the various county clerks prior to January 1, 1920, should be transmitted to the State Director, who was to receive, file, bind, and index all such certificates and preserve them in a fireproof vault as a permanent State record. A further provision was that certified copies of birth and death certificates could be made only from the original certificates and not from copies. As this act placed all original certificates in the custody of the State Health Department, it therefore follows that certified copies of birth and death certificates can issue only from that source. For issuing a certified copy of an original certificate of a birth or death, the Director of Public Health receives, from the party for whom issued, the sum of 50 cents, for which he accounts to the State Health Department. In this act it was required that all original birth certificates filed with the county clerks prior to January 1, 1920 should be forwarded to the State director before July 1, 1937, and that the district health officer forward each month to the State director all original certificates received by him. Thus all original certificates were to be held by the State Health Department. Provision was made in the 1937 act for the validation of births which had occurred more than one year previous to being filed for record.[2] The district court was vested with power to validate these certificates, but the Attorney General held that this provision was unconstitutional inasmuch as it delegated powers to the court which were not judicial in their nature.[3]

New Mexico was admitted to the United States Registration Area for both births and deaths in 1929.[4]

Certificates of births and deaths are not open to general inspection of the public except in the presence of the legal custodian of the records, and under such restrictions as the State Board of Public Health may by regulation prescribe. This precaution is taken to prevent

BIRTH RECORDS

BIRTH RECORDS

The first law in New Mexico requiring the recording of birth certificates was passed by the Legislature of 1907. By that act every physician, midwife, or other attendant who had professional charge of the mother at the birth of any child was required to furnish a certificate of such birth to the probate clerk of the county in which the birth took place, within 30 days after such birth. The said certificate was required to show the name of the child (if named), the number of this child born to this mother, the maiden name of the mother, the name, age, color, and nationality of each parent, the occupation of the father, the place of birth of father and mother, and the signature and address of the medical attendant. By the same act it was further required that the probate clerk keep a book styled "Register of Births" in which he was required to register and index all births reported as above required. Penalties were prescribed for failure to file the required certificates, and for failure to properly record them when filed.[1]

The above act was amended 2 years later by requiring that the probate clerk prepare a complete record of all births from April 21, 1907, and record and index these births as provided by law; also that in addition he certify and seal all original certificates filed with him and preserve the same in numerical order as permanent records in his office.[2] This was the first requirement for the preservation of original birth certificates.

From that time until 1919, when the State Department of Public Health was created, there were no changes in the requirements for recording births. With the creation of the State Health Department provision was made that the physician, midwife, or attendant at any birth should report the same to the State Health Department, direct, as well as to the county clerk, and required, moreover, that the clerk also report to the State Health Department each month all births reported to him during the previous month.[3] These provisions were amended in 1921, abolishing the requirement that reports be made by the attendant or physician direct to the State Health Department. Instead, provisions were made for the appointment, by the county health officer, of sub-registrars for the purpose of receiving birth certificates for registration. Such certificates, when completed were delivered to the county health officer who was required to make a copy of the same and deliver it to the county clerk, who in turn was required to receive, file, bind, and index all said certificates and preserve them as permanent records in his office. The county health officer was required to forward all original birth certificates by United States mail to the State Director of Public Health, who was to receive, file, bind, and index these original certificates for the permanent State records. Further provision was made that certified copies of any birth certificate could be made only from the original and not from copies,[1] which means that certified copies can be made only by the office of the State Director of Public Health.

The above mentioned act also provided that birth certificates were not to be open to the general inspection of the public, except in the presence of the legal custodian of such records and under such restrictions as the State Board of Public Welfare may, by regulation prescribe, in order to prevent mutilation, alteration, or injury.[2]

In 1925,[3] and again in 1927, the above act was amended but only with regard to the payment of subregistrars, although the 1927 law specifically repealed the law passed in 1907.[4]

County health officers were abolished by an act of 1935, which divided the State into ten health districts. All powers and duties formerly delegated to the county health officer were transferred to the district officer, including the requirements for handling and recording birth certificates.[5]

In 1937 there was created, as a public corporation, the State Department of Public Health, which replaced the former Bureau of Public Health and the State Department of Public Welfare. No change was made in the requirements for recording of births or issuance of birth certificates. By this act, however, it was required that the county clerk of each county transmit to the State Director of Public Health, before July 1, 1937, all original birth certificates filed in his office prior to January 1, 1920.[6] As it had been previously required that all original certificates after 1919 be forwarded to the State Department,[7] this made the State Department sole custodian of all original birth certificates. The 1937 act again required that certified copies could only be made from the original certificates and not from copies, and therefore only the State Department can issue certified copies of these certificates. For issuing a certified copy of a certificate the director of public health is authorized to charge a fee of 50 cents, for which he accounts to the State Treasurer.[8]

Births

In this 1937 act the first provision for the certifying of births occurring more than 1 year before filing for record was attempted. By the act the district judge was required to certify these delayed certificates upon presentation before the court of satisfactory proof of the birth having occurred at the time and place, and under the conditions represented. Upon this certification by the court the birth certificate was to be accepted for record.[1]

The Attorney General upon being asked for an opinion as to the validity of this provision, held that that portion of the act was invalid and void as it conferred nonjudicial powers upon the judiciary.[2]

This decision did not, however, in any way hamper the registration of delayed birth certificates, for in the act which created the State Health Department, the duty to collect, compile, and tabulate the reports of vital statistics was delegated to that department, and provision made that it was empowered "to require the submission of such information as may be required for such purposes."[3] Accordingly, the State Health Board outlined a form requiring the following information before accepting delayed birth certificates for record: Place of birth; full name of child; sex; twin or triplet; date of birth; full name of father; residence at time of this birth; race; age at time of this birth; birthplace; occupation; full maiden name of mother; residence at time of this birth; race; age at time of this birth; birthplace; occupation; number of children born to this mother including this birth, (a) born alive and now living, (b) born alive and now dead, (c) born dead. This statement must be certified by the attending physician, midwife, parent, or relative who was present at the birth. The certificate as outlined above must bear the affidavit of the party signing the above statement and an affidavit by a non-relative having knowledge of the birth in question. In addition to this, documentary evidence is now required to further substantiate birthdates, such as baptismal certificates, employment records of father, family Bible records, newspaper clippings, etc. Upon this form being filled out and verified to the satisfaction of the department, the certificate will be accepted for registration.

In the last session of the Legislature, an act was approved providing for the issuance of birth certificates to abandoned persons when information regarding their parentage or witnesses to their birth are unavailable, and satisfactory evidence being presented before a district judge, who shall certify to said certificate. The information contained in such certificates shall be filed in the same manner as now provided or as may be hereafter provided by law for the filing of other types of delayed birth certificates.[1] The Attorney General held, as he did in 1937, that this act was invalid and void as it conferred non-judicial powers on the judiciary.[2]

MARRIAGE RECORDS

MARRIAGE RECORDS

The first provisions for regulating marriages in New Mexico appeared in an act of the Legislature in 1860 entitled "An Act to incorporate the Mesilla Mining Company." This provided that it should be "lawful, valid, and binding, to all intents and purposes, for those who may so desire, to solemnize the contract of matrimony by means of any ordained clergyman whatsoever, without regard to the sect to which he may belong, or by means of any civil magistrate."[1] The term "civil magistrate" was held by the Supreme Court to include probate judges as well as justices of the peace and district judges in solemnizing the contract of matrimony.[2]

The Supreme Court has ruled that common law marriages are not valid in New Mexico.[3]

An act of the Legislature in 1863 required that all persons authorized to solemnize marriages should keep a register of all marriages celebrated before them, and that it should be their duty, on the first day of January and of July of each year, or at every regular term of the probate court in each county, to transmit a certificate containing the names in full of all persons united in marriage before them, setting forth the dates on which said marriages were celebrated, which report was to be addressed to the clerk of the probate court.[4] Any of the foregoing persons who neglected, refused, or failed to make the required report of all the marriages solemnized before him within the time specified, was to be held an infractor of the law, and on conviction to be fined in any sum not less than $25 nor more than $50, which together with other costs accrued, were to be recovered by the prosecutor as an action of debt before any court having jurisdiction in the case.[5]

Furthermore it was the duty of the clerks of the various probate courts to prepare books of registry, wherein they recorded all the reports made to them of marriages celebrated. In any case a clerk of the probate court refused or failed to comply with the above provisions he was to be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction was to be fined not less than $50 nor more than $100.[6]

The same act further provided that it should be lawful for any religious society to celebrate marriage conformably with the rites and customs thereof, and that the secretary of said society or the person presiding over the same should make and transmit a transcript to the probate court certifying to the marriages so solemnized. The probate clerk was to record these marriages in the manner heretofore prescribed for those performed by civil magistrates. In case the society or the secretary or president thereof failed to comply with these provisions they were to incur the same penalty provided for civil magistrates.[1]

The copy of a certificate of any recorded marriage, as provided above, authenticated by the probate court as recorder, was to be competent evidence in all the courts to establish that such marriage was celebrated in conformity to law.[2]

If any person authorized to solemnize marriage voluntarily united any parties in matrimony in contravention of the provisions of this act, or voluntarily made a false return of any marriage or pretended marriage to the recorder, or if such recorder voluntarily made a false record of any marriage return, the same was to be punished by any court having jurisdiction in the case, by a fine of not less than $100, or a sentence to hard labor, being confined in the jail of the county wherein the offense was committed, for a term of not less than three months, or both, at the discretion of the court.[3]

An act of 1864 required that it should be the duty of the persons authorized to perform marriages to collect, from the contracting parties of the marriage, $0.50 and to transmit the same together with the transcript, according to the act of 1863.[4]

In 1905 it was provided that all persons desiring to enter into the marriage relation should obtain a license from the probate clerk in the county wherein they desire the marriage to occur.[5]

With the adoption of the Constitution in 1912 all duties relating to marriages heretofore performed by the probate clerk were transferred to the county clerk.[6]

In 1915 the 1905 act was amended so that whenever the contracting parties reside more than 10 miles from the county seat of any county they may, if they desire, make application for such license to any person authorized to perform marriages or to administer oaths, under the laws of the State, who is to interrogate them in the manner prescribed by the laws of the State, certifying the result thereof to the county clerk in writing, without expense to the applicants. Upon satisfactory proof being produced that the parties are legally qualified to marry, the county clerk is to thereupon issue a license authorizing said parties to contract marriage.[1]

This act also required that all persons authorized to solemnize marriage shall require the parties contemplating marriage to produce a license signed and sealed by the clerk authorizing said marriage. Nothing in this act was to be construed as excusing any person from exercising the same care in satisfying himself as to the legal qualifications of any parties desiring him to perform the marriage ceremony, now required of him by law, in addition to the authority conferred by the license aforesaid.[2]

The act of 1905 further provided that it shall be the duty of all persons performing the marriage ceremony to certify said marriage to the clerk within 90 days from the date of marriage. The clerk shall immediately upon receipt of said certificate, cause the same to be properly recorded and indexed in a permanent record book kept for that purpose as a part of the county records. A uniform system of records and certificates was also provided for.[3]

All marriages celebrated or contracted in the Territory of New Mexico during the year 1905 without the persons entering into the marriage relation having first obtained a license from the probate clerk of the proper county, but which marriages were valid according to the law as it existed prior to April 13, 1905 were validated and legalized by an act of the Legislature in 1909, the same being in the same force and effect as if such marriage had been celebrated or contracted after a proper license had been obtained.[4]

In 1919 an act was passed requiring that everyone solemnizing marriages must report the same to the State Board of Health within 30 days after the date of performing same. The county clerk was also to report all marriages recorded by him to the State Board of Health by the tenth of each month for the month last past.[5] The provisions of this act relating to marriages was repealed in 1921.[6]

DIVORCE RECORDS

DIVORCE RECORDS

No attempt has been made in this volume to tabulate records of divorces as the law makes no provision for the keeping of separate divorce records in the State of New Mexico. All records of such cases are to be found in the case files and records of the various district courts. Previous to 1912, divorce records are to be found in the case files and records of the Territorial district courts. Such cases are indexed along with the regular district court indices and are not in any way distinct from the regular record of civil cases.

The customary fee for furnishing certified copies of divorce judgments is $0.50 each and transcripts of hearings and decrees will be furnished by the clerk of the district court at a cost of $0.10 per hundred words.

REPORTS AND OPINIONS OF ATTORNEY GENERAL

(Repts. and Opins. of Atty. Gen. 1909-1912, p. 125)

Under Chapter 91, Laws of 1907, and Chapter 39, Laws of 1909, probate clerk is authorized to record and index only births and deaths certified to him by persons mentioned in the statute.

April 12, 1910

Hon. C. C. Catron,
Assistant District Attorney,
Santa Fe, New Mexico.

Dear Sir:

I am in receipt of your communication of the 11th inst., asking for the opinion of this office as to whether under Chapter 91 of the Laws of 1907 and Chapter 39 of the Laws of 1909, the probate clerk should register all births and deaths coming to his knowledge or taken from church records, or whether he is only required to register such births and deaths upon the receipt of the certificate of a physician, mid-wife, etc., mentioned in sections 1 and 2 of the Act of 1907.

Section 1 and 2 of Chapter 91 of the Laws of 1907 provide that every physician or mid-wife, and every attendant who may act as mid-wife, or any person who shall attend a person in his or her last illness, shall furnish the clerk of the probate court a certificate of such fact. Sections 3 and 4 of the same act makes it the duty of the probate clerk to register and index all births and deaths "reported to him." In my opinion the words "reported to him" undoubtedly refer to the certificates mentioned in sections 1 and 2, and that it is no part of the duty of the probate clerk to register any births or deaths occurring in his county unless furnished with such certificates. Chapter 39 of the Laws of 1909 is an amendment of section 5 of Chapter 91 of the Laws of 1907, and reads in part as follows:

> "It shall be the duty of the probate clerk to prepare a complete record of all births and deaths from the 21th [sic] day of April, A. D. 1907, within his county and record and index the said reports as herein provided."

The conclusion must be reached that the words "the said reports as herein provided," refer to the certificates mentioned in sections 1 and 2 of the Laws of 1907, Chapter 39 of the Laws of 1909, having become a part of the Act of 1907.

My opinion therefore is, that the probate clerk is only required to record and index births and deaths occurring in his county upon a certificate executed by the persons mentioned in section 1 and 2 of Chapter 91 of the Laws of 1907, and further it is my opinion that the clerk is not authorized to register and index births and deaths, information of which he may obtain from other sources.

Yours truly,

H. S. CLANCY,
Assistant Attorney General

Opinion No. 1521

February 6, 1937

Mr. A. H. McLeod
Assistant District Attorney
Albuquerque, New Mexico

Dear Mr. McLeod:

Your letter of February 5th relative to copies of birth and death certificates has been received and you inquire why it is necessary to obtain copies of death certificates from the Public Health Department in Santa Fe.

Your attention is directed to Section 110-316 of the 1929 compilation, wherein it is provided in the next to the last paragraph that all original birth and death certificates shall be transmitted by the County Health Officer by United States mail to the Director of Public Health, etc.

Also, in the third paragraph of said section it is provided that certified copies of birth and death certificates shall be made only from the original certificates and not from copies.

In the paragraph from which we have first quoted we find the provision that the County Health Officer is to make true and correct copies in unfading ink of all birth and death certificates filed with him and shall deliver such copies to the County Clerk. The County Clerk shall receive, file, bind and index for the permanent county record all copies of birth and death certificates delivered to him by the County Health Officer.

You can, therefore, readily see that the records in the office of the County Clerk are copies merely and that the original goes to the Director of Public Health and, therefore, under the provisions requiring certified copies to be made only from the original, the County Clerk would have no authority as any copies made by her would merely be a copy made from a copy.

Very truly yours,

Frank H. Patton,
Attorney General

Opinion No. 1541

February 24, 1937

Miss Billy Tober
State Registrar
Bureau of Public Health
Santa Fe, New Mexico

Dear Miss Tober:

Your letter inquiring whether the county clerk is required to have custody of the birth certificates made prior to 1907, and to issue certified copies, and, if not, who would have such authority, has been received.

The first legislation we are able to find on the subject was Chapter 91 of the Laws of 1907. This statute requires the county clerk to have custody of the birth and death certificates from April 21st, 1907, but it makes no provision whatever as to records which might have been made prior to that date.

We find no legislation providing for the keeping of records prior to that date, and nothing authorizing the filing with the clerks of such certificates made prior to that date. That being the case, it would seem that the clerk referred to by you is correct in her attitude that she has no authority to keep these records or to issue certified copies thereof.

However, Section 110-310 of the 1929 Compilation authorizes the State Department of Public Welfare to collect, compile and tabulate reports of marriages, births and deaths and to require any person having information with regard to the same to make such reports and submit such information as it is by regulation provided. This, I believe, is broad enough to permit the State Bureau of Public Welfare to have all of such certificates filed with that department, and that department in turn could issue certified copies thereof.

Very truly yours,

FRANK H. PATTON,
Attorney General.

(Repts. and Opins. of Atty. Gen. 1937-1938, p. 122)

Opinion No. 1677

June 15, 1937

Hon. James D. McGhee
District Judge
Roswell, New Mexico
State Department of Public Health
Santa Fe, New Mexico

Gentlemen:

This opinion is in response to a request that this office pass upon the validity of the following portion of Section 11, Chapter 39, Laws of 1937, relating to the certification of births by a district judge. We herein set out the portion involved as follows:

> "Certification of births occurring one year or more before the date of filing shall be made by a district judge upon a form prescribed by regulation of the State Board and after submission of evidence conclusive to the court that the birth took place as stated on the certificate, the judge shall affix his seal and signature to such certificate and order that it be filed with the district health officer of the health district in which the birth took place."

The first question presenting itself is whether the legislature, by the aforementioned section of the law, imposed upon the district courts of this state duties which are nonjudicial. If so, such legislation is invalid for that reason alone.

A general statement of the law on this proposition is found in Corpus Juris as follows:

> "(sec. 242) d. Imposing Nonjudicial Duties. In the absence of express constitutional provision, the legislature cannot assign to the judiciary any duties other than those properly judicial, to be performed in a judicial manner." 12 C. J. 810.

The following statement is also found in Corpus Juris:

> "(sec. 376) 2. Statutes Confering on Courts of Judges Nonjudicial Powers--a. In General. Under the American constitutional system, not only is it true that the judiciary may not, of its own authority, exercise powers not judicial, but, generally speaking, it is also true that the legislature may not confer or impose such powers upon the judiciary." 12 C. J. 873.

Appendix

Our constitution makes no effort to accurately define the scope or nature of the judicial powers and, as a matter of fact, the term "judicial power" is not capable of a precise definition. Various definitions have been announced by various courts and various tests have been suggested for determining what are or are not judicial powers or duties.

However, duties performed by a district judge do not become judicial acts merely because they are performed by a judicial officer, notwithstanding an act of the legislature requiring the performance of such duties. If the action of the judicial officer is in regard to matters which are exclusively executive or administrative in their nature, then the act of the legislature imposing such a duty upon the district judge is invalid and void. See Esmeralda County vs. Third District Court, 5 Pac. 64, 18 Nev. 438.

By Chapter 39, Laws of 1937, the legislature vested in the State Department of Public Health, an administrative branch of the executive department, the administration of our public health laws, with power to make and enforce rules and regulations for the enforcement of our health laws. Section 11 of said act provides that each district health officer, by and with the approval of the Board of Public Health, shall appoint sub-registrars for the purpose of receiving for registration birth and death certificates. Said section then provides that certification of births occurring one year or more prior to the date of filing shall be made by a district judge upon a form prescribed by regulation of the State Board of Public Health.

It appears from the act, therefore, that the district judge is called upon to do an administrative act rather than a judicial act. The only difference between a district judge and a sub-registrar is that the sub-registrar takes care of all certifications where the birth took place within one year from the date of presentation of the certificate, whereas the district judge takes care of all certifications where the birth occurred one year or more prior to the date of filing of the certificate. That the act imposes an administrative rather than a judicial duty is evidenced by the fact that the legislature made no provision for a hearing or judicial investigation, nor does the act specify who, if anyone, may be parties to any purported judicial proceeding, nor does the act provide for notice to be served on anyone, nor does the act contemplate that any action taken by the district judge shall be a final determination of some right of some party, nor does the act contemplate that the action of the judge shall in any way be conclusive and binding on anyone. Very much in point is the case of Home Insurance Company vs. Flint, 13 Minn. Rep. 235, where the Supreme Court of Minnesota stated as follows:

> "A judicial investigation proceeds after notice, and eventuates in a judgment, which is the final determination of the rights of the parties, unless reversed by an appellate tribunal. The necessity of notice in the inception, and the conclusive character of the determination, are perhaps as good a test as any other, as to what proceedings are judicial. In this case it cannot be pretended that notice is required, or that the determination, or certificate, would be conclusive in collateral proceedings."

So it is with the matter at hand. It does appear that that portion of Section 1 of Chapter 39, Laws of 1937, herein involved does not purport to assign to the judiciary a judicial duty to be performed in a judicial manner, and for that reason alone it is void and invalid as imposing nonjudicial duties upon the judicial branch of our government.

There is only one phase of the section of law herein involved, which might be construed as imposing a judicial duty upon the district courts and that is the following provision:

"after submission of evidence conclusive to the court that the birth took place as stated on the certificate, the judge shall affix his seal and signature to such certificate and order that it be filed, etc."

Even assuming that the duties so imposed are judicial, it does appear that the terms of the section of the law imposing those duties are so vague, indefinite, uncertain and incomplete, that if properly attacked in court, I believe the same would be declared inoperative and void for those reasons.

If the duties imposed are in fact judicial, then the following are some of the questions that at once present themselves:

1. How should the alleged judicial proceedings be instituted?

2. Who, if any one, are proper parties to institute such an alleged judicial proceeding?

3. Upon whom, if any one, should notice be served of the inception of the alleged judicial proceedings.

4. Is the action of the court a final determination of the rights of any person?

5. Is the determination or judge's certificate conclusive in a collateral proceedings?

6. And last but not least, where is the venue for the alleged proceedings?

Frankly, if called upon to answer the above questions we are forced to state that from a reading of the act the same can not be definitely answered. This being the case, the following rules of law are applicable:

Appendix

"(Sec. 160) c. Certainty and Definiteness (Statutes). An act of the legislature, to have the force and effect of a law, must be intelligibly expressed. Where the terms of an act are so vague as to convey no definite meaning to those whose duty it is to execute it, ministerially or judicially, it is inoperative." 59 C. J. 601.

"(Sec. 62) Indefiniteness and Uncertainty. Where an act of the legislature is so vague, indefinite and uncertain that the courts are unable to determine, with any reasonable degree of certainty, what the legislature intended, or is so incomplete * * * in its provisions that it can not be executed, it will be declared to be inoperative and void." 25 R. C. L. 810.

The Supreme Court of this state has very recently expressed itself on matters of this kind in the case of Safeway Stores vs. Vigil, reported in 40 N. M. 190, 57 P. (2d) 287. Our Supreme Court there used the following language:

"When the language of an act appears on its face to have a meaning, but it is impossible to give it any precise or intelligible application in the circumstances under which it was intended to operate, it is simply void."

We conclude, therefore, that if the legislative act herein involved be construed as imposing a non-judicial duty upon the judiciary of this state it is void as imposing non-judicial duties upon the judicial branch of our government. If, on the other hand, the does in fact impose upon the courts a judicial duty, then the act is inoperative and void for the reason that it is indefinite, uncertain and incomplete and impossible of any precise or intelligible application in the circumstances under which it was intended to operate.

FRANK H. PATTON,
Attorney General

Miss Billy Tober
State Registrar and Bookkeeper
Bureau of Public Health
Santa Fe, New Mexico

My dear Miss Tober:

This will acknowledge receipt of your letter dated June 21st wherein you ask for an interpretation of that portion of Section 11, Chapter 39, Laws of 1937, providing as follows:

". . . . all original birth and death certificates filed with the county clerks prior to January 1, 1920, shall be transmitted by the County Clerks to the Director on or before July 1, 1937."

Under said section of law, as it now reads, the various county clerks apparently have no choice other than to transmit such original birth and death certificates to the Director of Public Health; this should be done prior to July 1, 1937.

Very truly yours,

FRANK H. PATTON,

Opinion No. 3884

August 27, 1941

Miss Billy Tober
State Registrar of Vital Statistics
Department of Public Health
Santa Fé, New Mexico

Dear Miss Tober:

In your letter of August 23, 1941, you refer to Chapter 136, Laws of 1941, and inquire whether or not this law gives the District Judge the power to name an abandoned child and also whether the State Board of Public Health is empowered to draw up regulations governing the reporting of such births in the event that this law is valid.

Under Chapter 39 of the Laws of 1937, Section 11, a provision appears as follows:

> "Certification of births occurring one year or more before the date of filing shall be made by a district judge upon a form prescribed by regulation of the State Board and after submission of evidence conclusive to the court that the birth took place as stated on the certificate, the judge shall affix his seal and signature to such certificate and order that it be filed with the district health officer of the health district in which the birth took place."

Section 1, Chapter 136, Laws of 1941, provides as follows:

> "The District Judge in any district where a child is abandoned and information regarding parentage and witnesses to the child's birth are unavailable, may upon satisfactory evidence being presented, even though said evidence be wholly circumstantial, certify to the date and place of birth and parentage of said child as nearly as the same may be ascertained, and the District Judge so certifying shall fix his seal and signature to said certificate."

In an opinion from this office written to Judge James S. McGhee and to the State Department of Public Health, dated June 15, 1937, it was held that the provision above quoted in Section 11, Chapter 39, Laws of 1937, was invalid and void, either because it imposed a non-judicial duty upon the judiciary of this state or, if it did not impose such a non-judicial duty, that it was nevertheless void and inoperative for the reason that it is indefinite, uncertain, incomplete and impossible of any precise or intelligible application in the circumstances under which it was intended to operate.

Appendix

For the reasons above stated, it is suggested that the State Board of Public Health draw up a set of regulations governing the situation intended to be covered by this law and handle the same in much the same manner as you no doubt are handling certification of births occurring one year or more before the date of filing.

Very truly yours,

EDWARD P. CHASE,
Attorney General

By: C. C. MCCULLOH,
Asst. Atty. Gen.

INSTRUCTIONS FOR FILING A DELAYED BIRTH CERTIFICATE

In order to file a birth certificate, after more than 4 years have elapsed since the date of birth, a DELAYED BIRTH CERTIFICATE form must be filled out giving all information as it was at the time the birth occurred. Please read these instructions carefully. If instructions are not followed in every way, we will not consider your application for filing.

1. Fill in face of certificate giving all information as it was at the time of birth, using a good grade of black or blue-black ink or a black typewriter ribbon.

2. Do not make any erasures or alterations on the certificate. Any certificate corrected with ink eradicator will not be accepted.

3. Have the face of the certificate signed by one of the following:
   (a) The attending physician (b) The Midwife, Nurse, or Other Attendant
   (c) Closest living relative who was 16 years of age or over at time of the birth.

4. Be sure their present address and date certificate is signed by them are on the form.

5. Affidavit A can be executed only by a relative, preferably one of the parents. It must not be signed by a sister or brother, unless they were 16 years of age or older at the time this birth occurred.

6. Affidavit B must be executed by the attending physician, midwife, or nurse, if they sign the face of the certificate.

7. If the physician, midwife, or nurse is not available, then any other non-relative, who was 16 years of age or over at time of birth and who is now a resident of New Mexico and was a resident at the time the birth occurred, should sign Affidavit B, if possible.

8. All affidavits must be executed before an official qualified to administer oaths. A Notary Public is preferred, and Seal must be used and expiration of commission date given.

9. The person signing the face of the certificate must execute one of the affidavits on the reverse side.

10. IMPORTANT! At least one piece of documentary evidence, established 5 years or more prior to date of application, and preferably within 10 years of date of birth, must be submitted to substantiate the facts given on the delayed birth certificate form. This is in addition to the 2 affidavits required, with one exception -
    (a) If the attending physician signs the face of the certificate and executes Affidavit B, no documentary evidence will be required, but Affidavit A should be completed by closest living relative, if possible.

Baptismal certificates, employment records, old family Bible records, newspaper clippings regarding birth, school records, insurance policies, et cetera, may be submitted as supporting evidence. Original evidence should be submitted. It will be returned to you. File all original evidence for future use. You may need to produce it with your certified copy of your birth certificate.

OFFICE OF

DEPARTMENT OF COMMERCE

BUREAU OF THE CENSUS

WASHINGTON

To obtain a copy of information in the Census records concerning yourself, which you have requested, you must fill out and mail the enclosed application to the Bureau of the Census, Washington, D. C.

There are no records in the Census Bureau upon which a regular birth certificate can be issued by this Bureau. Birth certificates are issued by vital statistics offices of the States in which the births occurred. At each Census, however, the Census takers obtained the age and place of birth of every person reported. Copies of these records usually are accepted as evidence in support of age or place of birth, for employment purposes, or in connection with delayed registration of births in the States where births occurred.

Copies of Federal Census records are supplied without charge if you are willing to wait your turn. Because of the large number of applications, this will mean a delay of several weeks or more due to our limited staff. If an immediate search is necessary, a fee of $3.00 must be paid, which covers the cost of hiring a special searcher. When this service is desired, a money order for this amount ($3.00), drawn on Washington, D. C., and made payable to the Treasurer of the United States, must be sent to this Bureau with your application.

Names in the Census records are not alphabetically arranged but appear in the order they were reported to the Census takers on their calls from house to house. Therefore, before the name of a person can be located in these records, this office must have the following information:

1. Exact place of residence of the individual on the date of a Federal Census:
   Be sure, if living in a city, to give the name of the street and the number of the house, or the names of the cross streets between which the house was located; if in the country, the name of the county, town, village, or township, and the number of the district, precinct, or beat.
2. Names of parents of the individual or name of the person in whose household he resided at the time of the Census.

Since the Bureau has indexes, by States, of the families and individuals reported at the Censuses of 1880, 1900, and 1920, complete information for these three Censuses should be given special attention in filling out the application.

The personal information recorded at the Censuses of 1900 to 1940, both inclusive, is strictly confidential and will be furnished only, upon written request, to the person himself or to his authorized representative. No information is available from the 1890 Census as those records were destroyed by fire. The 1940 Census records will not be available for searches until the latter part of 1942 or the first part of 1943.

Please do not request a search of the Census records unless you have been unable to obtain the information from State or local records.

Sincerely yours,

J. C. Capt
Director
